ADDRESS.

In preparing this Catalogue, the plan has been adopted of forming distinct compartments of the bound and the unbound portions of the Library; so as to exhibit, at a glance, the state of the books, and to enable those who cannot conveniently attend the sale, to transmit their orders with less danger of being mistaken in the condition of such works as they may wish to procure.

For the further convenience of purchasers, the portion which will be sold during each day of the Auction is marked out, and from this arrangement there will be no deviation. Gentlemen can thus ascertain almost the moment at which any particular work will be brought to the hammer.

To the nobility and gentry, to the universities and the literary public, the Catalogue is now presented, with the hope that whatever errors may be perceived in it will be kindly excused, in consideration of the unfavourable circumstances under which a sale Catalogue must be drawn up, so different from the literary ease of a scholar in his study, with his books of reference and other literary aids within his reach.
