Preface

This little volume, as memorial of Mary C. Ford, is prayerfully sent forth upon its mission. We do not presume, nor imagine, nor boast that this volume has a mission; but we fully believe it, and therefore we know that this book has a mission and a purpose, deep, ample, definite, of love and good-will and Gospel salvation, unto many in our modern humanities who are absorbed too much in "the strenuous life" of the present fleeting world in which we are all delving, rather than trying to follow the example of "the simple life" of Jesus, which is preparatory for the better spiritual life of the world which is to come.

We submitted the manuscript to a gentleman of high literary culture and renown; who, after an hour's careful examination, said with emphasis and emotion: "This memorial should be scattered abroad by the ten thousand and be in all Sunday School and other libraries and on every literary desk and table. It would be a
