NOTICE.

THE following Tale will be found to depart from history only in three particulars: 1.—Churchill did not send the three regiments, of which Cornbury was the senior officer, to Salisbury, till after the news had been received of William's landing. 2.—The Earl of Middleton was the nobleman who aroused the King for the reception of the commissioners on the last night that he slept in London. 3.—The entry of William into Exeter happened rather earlier than is here represented.
