PREFACE.

NEVER could it be more truly said than now, that in all parts of the world "THE FIELDS ARE WHITE UNTO THE HARVEST;" but the labourers are few:— At the same time, in most parishes among the Working Classes, men are to be found of similar character and attainments to HENRY ELLIOTT, wandering in the mazes of Secularism and other errors, whose mental vision might be cleared by the friendly aid of their Clergyman, and their energies and acquirements converted to the service of God and the good of man. Who can estimate the value of such men in laying the foundation of Society in our new Colonies, communities yet to exercise such a mighty influence on the world ?
