PREFACE.

THE following pages have been written as a contribution towards the furtherance of domestic peace and happiness. It is often made a subject of complaint, that both family and household ties have, during these later years, become somewhat loosened. If the complaint be founded on fact, the evil complained of can only have arisen from a neglect of the relative duties; and it is worthy of consideration, whether this neglect may not be partly ascribed to the very common disuse (as compared with former days) of the systematic instruction of the young from the Word of God. Be this as it may, all Christians will confess that the remedy for the evil, is to be found in the correction and regulation of every member of the family and household by the rules and duties which the Scriptures prescribe and enjoin. It is accordingly to their exposition that these pages are devoted; and may He, by whose Spirit His Word is inspired, graciously condescend to use what has been written, for the instruction and blessing of those for whom the volume is intended!
