ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This study was begun in 1910 in a seminar on The Foundations of Modern Education conducted by Dr. Paul Monroe; to him I am naturally deeply indebted for guidance in carrying out the work of investigating and organizing the material. To Dean Russell and the committee in charge of the fund for Foreign Research Scholarships I owe grateful acknowledgment of the fact that they made it possible for me to spend the summer of 1911 in Germany, thus enabling me to widen the range of my sources. Dr. Arthur Köhler, of Das königlich sächsische Institut für Kultur- und Universalgeschichte, gave me great assistance by making it possible for me to have access to the library of the Institut and through it to the Libraries of the University and the city of Leipzig. I am indebted to my friend Mr. W. D. Head for aid in the drudgery of reading and revising manuscript.
