The following Rhymes have been written at odd moments in the midst of daily toil by one whose school days were few, and whose means of improvement have continued very limited. Most of the pieces have already appeared in local newspapers, but they are now presented to the public in a collected form at the request of friends. The Author is fully conscious of their many imperfections, yet it is his earnest hope that the time spent in their perusal will not be felt by the Reader to be entirely thrown away.
