PREFACE.

I HAVE been provoked to put together (after considerable revision) some scattered memories of dogs which (beginning many years ago) have appeared in the Leisure Hour, the Cornhill Magazine, Holiday Papers, and East and West London.

In their wanderings they have met with the kindest of "pats," one of the warmest and most welcome having been bestowed by the author of "Rab and his Friends," who, writing to me genially about the original collection of essays in which their names appeared, says (his faded letter is now before me), "'Bo' and the Jupiters and Brisks, the moody Mungo, the ovivorous Cæsar, and dear tender-conscienced Busy—I know them all."

Let me hope that what I now tell of these old dog-friends and their successors may promote the right knowledge of so-called "dumb" animals, and thus help to bring about such a Christian treatment of them as they have a right to expect at the hands of every one, man or child, who reads this little book.

"He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small ;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

DOGS I HAVE KNOWN.

CHAPTER I.

BRISK AND JUPITER.

Dogs were among my earliest friends. I recollect (and it's one of the first essays I can call to my remembrance) trying to write the news from home, and putting it down thus: "Bo is well;" nor did I quite believe a meddlesome informant who told me that my dear dog-friend always spelt his name "Beau." The public continued to call him "Bo" without correction, and I therefore very fairly
