INTRODUCTION.

THE subject of the return of the Jewish people to the favour of the God of their fathers is one of deep and surpassing interest and moment. The eye of faith, looking into the depth of the divine records, perceives this peculiar people, under the cloud of a frowning Providence, prepared in the fulness of time to be led forward and planted in the Lord their Righteousness, for a name and a praise in every land : (Isaiah lxii. 7.) It beholds them, not as the subjects of the divine hatred, but the objects of God's compassionate love : (Isaiah xlix. 15, 16.) It distinctly perceives that a regard for, and scriptural interest in this people, are co-ordinate with the progress of evangelical truth and personal attainment in the divine life ; that neglect of them is
