ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Ralph Borsodi, economist, and Mrs. Borsodi were first to clarify my nebulous notions about what sort of book this would be. Lester Moffett, editor of Electrical Merchandising, was generous with counsel and material; so were the editors of women's magazines. To Lillian Church, senior clerk in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, I owe much of my background material for the chapter on farming. Executives of concerns manufacturing domestic appliances were invariably helpful although they knew I would not mention their brands. Elizabeth Sims Bent, my wife, was patient in assistance and wise in advice.
