To Shakespeare.

THE Muses sugred dainties seem to us
Like the fan'd Apples of old Tantalus ;
For we (admiring) see and hear thy strains
But none I see or hear those sweets attain.

*"Enter King and Salisbury, and then the curtaines be drawne, and the Cardinall is discovered in his bed, raving and staring
as if he were madde.*

Cor. Oh death, if thou wilt let me live but one whole yeare,
Ile give thee as much gold as will purchase such another Iland.

King. Oh see my Lord of Salisbury how he is troubled.

Lord Cardinall, remember Christ must save thy soule.

Cor. Why died he not in his bed?

What would you have me to do then?

Can I make men live whether they will or no?

Sirra, go fetch me the strong poison which the Pothicary sent me.

Oh see where Duke Humphreys ghoast doth stand,

And stares me in the face. Looke, looke, comes downe his haire,

So now hees gone againe: Oh, oh, oh.

Sal. See how the pangues of death doth gripe his heart.

King. Lord Cardinall, if thou diest assured of heavenly blisse,

Hold up thy hand and make some signe to us.

[The Cardinall dies.

Oh see he dies, and makes no signe at all.

Oh God forgive his soule.

Sal. So bad an ende did never none behold,

But as his death, so was his life in all.

King. Forbear to iudge, good Salisbury forbear,

For God will iudge us all.

Go take him hence, and see his funerals be performde.

[Exit omnes."
