Know most of the rooms of thy native country before thou goest over the threshold thereof. — Fuller.

Travelling is no fool's errand to him who carries his eyes and itinerary along with him. — Alcott.

MANCHESTER, N. H.:
PRESS OF JOHN B. CLARKE.
1884.

1. The first part of the text discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions.

2. It then goes on to describe the various methods used to collect and analyze data.

3. The next section details the results of the study, showing a clear trend in the data.

4. Finally, the text concludes with a summary of the findings and their implications.

5. The overall conclusion is that the data strongly supports the hypothesis.

6. This research provides valuable insights into the underlying mechanisms.

7. The findings suggest that there is a significant correlation between the variables.

8. Further research is needed to explore the relationship in greater detail.

9. The study has identified several key factors that influence the outcome.

10. In conclusion, the results are highly significant and warrant further investigation.

EXPLANATORY.

The letters composing this book were written to the Manchester, N. H., MIRROR by a member of the Raymond Excursion Party which left Boston, May 1, 1884, for a trip across the continent and to the Pacific Northwest. They are brief notes and impressions of the most salient points of interest embraced in visits to Colorado, New Mexico, California, Oregon, Washington Territory, Puget Sound, Vancouver's Island, Idaho, Montana and Utah, addressed to a newspaper constituency with no thought of other publication, and are necessarily of a casual and rambling nature. That they are permitted to make another addition to the fast-increasing multitude of books of travel is due to the urgent desire of members of the party and numerous readers of the letters as they appeared in the MIRROR to have them put before the public in this form.
