PREFATORY NOTE TO THIRD ISSUE

The present issue has been revised and brought to date.

Some of the topics treated in the material added since the Second Issue of the List include:

Restriction of immigration.—The documents relating to the recent legislation which resulted in the passage of a law regulating the immigration of aliens to the United States, approved Feb. 10, 1907, are noted on pp. 111-112 of this List.

Nature and tendencies of Immigration.—Among the new publications are to be noted Hall's "Immigration and its effects on the United States;" Grose's "Aliens or Americans?" "The Incoming millions." The subject is also discussed by Wells in "The future in America."

Personal experiences among immigrants are Braun's "Immigration abuses;" Steiner's "On the trail of the immigrant."

The subject of Japanese immigration, which has recently occupied public attention is treated in a number of magazine articles and in speeches in Congress. These are noted on pp. 90-94 of this List.

Leading articles on Italian immigration include Preziosi in "Rivista internazionale," vol. 38, pp. 358-370; vol. 42, pp. 199-214; Meade in the "South Atlantic quarterly," vol. 4, pp. 217-223; Barker in the "Arena," vol. 34, pp. 174-176; Caracristi in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 48, pp. 63-65; Castiglione in the "American journal of sociology," vol. 11, pp. 183-206; article in the "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 32, pp. 361-363; Speranza, in "Charities," vol. 15, pp. 114-116; Stevenson in "Public opinion," vol. 39, pp. 453-456; Scott in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 48, pp. 423-424; the article in "La Rassegna nazionale," vol. 146, pp. 471-487; Gonnard; in "Questions diplomatiques et coloniales," vol. 21, pp. 36-45, 96-110, Mayor des Planches in "Nuova Antologia," in articles running through new series, vols. 121-124; Carr, in the "Outlook," vol. 82, pp. 419-431; Ghio in "Journal des économistes," 6th series, vol. 9, pp. 321-336; Casson in "Munsey's magazine," vol. 36, pp. 112-116; Schultze in "Zeitschrift für Socialwissenschaft," Jahrg. 9, pp. 642-662; Villari in "Nuova antologia," vol. 127, pp. 33-56; and Stone in the "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 35, pp. 209-213.

Scandinavian immigration is treated by Flom in "Iowa journal of history and politics," vol. 3, pp. 347-389, 583-615, vol. 4, pp. 220-244, 267-285; in the article in the "World to-day," vol. 9, pp. 1293-1297; in the article in the "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 34, pp. 224-225; by Casson in "Munsey's magazine," vol. 35, pp. 613-618; and by Wisby in "North American review," vol. 183, pp. 213-223.

German immigration is discussed by Casson in "Munsey's magazine," vol. 34, pp. 694-707; in the article in the "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 33, pp. 480-481; by Duncker in "Deutsche Wirtschafts-Zeitung," vol. 11, pp. 436-439, 492-496; and by Baron von Sternburg in "North American review," vol. 182, pp. 641-650.

Hungarian immigration is considered by Mailath in "Revue économique internationale," vol. 2, pp. 486-511; De Levay in the "North American review," vol. 182, pp. 115-122; in the article in the "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 33, pp. 354-356; and by Gonnard in "Questions diplomatiques et coloniales," vol. 23, pp. 26-33.

Immigration to the South is the subject of the following discussions: Fleming in the "Political science quarterly," vol. 20, pp. 276-297; review of Fleming's article in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 47, pp. 575-576; Meade in the "South Atlantic quarterly," vol. 4, pp. 217-223; Caracristi in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 48, pp. 63-65; Stevenson in "Public opinion," vol. 39, pp. 453-456; Ward in the "Atlantic monthly," vol. 96, pp. 611-617; Scott, in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 48, pp. 423-424; Badenhoop, in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 48, pp. 514-515; Mayor des Planches in "Nuova Antologia," in articles running through new series vol. 121-124; Patten in "Business magazine," vol. 15, pp. 115-122; Leucht in "Charities and the Commons," vol. 16, pp. 275-277; articles in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 49, pp. 423-428, 515; Tilden in the "Nation," vol. 82, pp. 298-299; Gordon in "Manufacturers' record," vol. 49, pp. 578-579; McRae in the "Manufacturers' record," vol. 49, p. 694; Merry in "Railway world," vol. 51, pp. 11-12; Stone in "American monthly review of reviews," vol. 35, pp. 209-213.

The pamphlet issued by the National civic federation entitled "Facts about immigration" was received too late for entry in the body of the List, and is here noted.

The subject index with which this issue of the List is provided is a guide to specific phases of the immigration question.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE SECOND ISSUE

The present issue is mainly a reprint from the plates of the first. It has, however, been made to include the publications which have been added to the Library since the first issue by the substitution of recent titles for some of the early and less important works.

The articles in periodicals, Congressional documents, consular reports, etc., have been brought to date.

Among the new publications there are to be noted:

Immigration in its general aspects in the principal countries of the world.—Whelpley's "The problem of the immigrant," in which are reprinted his articles in the "Fortnightly review," vol. 77, pp. 817-826 and the "North American review," vol. 180, pp. 856-867.

Restriction of immigration.—The publications of the Immigration restriction league, noted on pages 28 and 29 of this List; Ward's "The immigration problem" and the same author's essay in the "North American review," vol. 179, pp. 226-237, advocating an educational test; Whelpley in "World's work," vol. 8, pp. 5254-5259, the "Fortnightly review," vol. 77, pp. 317-326, and the "North American review," vol. 180, pp. 856-867, looking upon immigration as an international affair and an agreement among nations as desirable; Ernest Crosby in the "Arena," vol. 32, pp. 596-602 favorable to immigration; McLaughlin in a series of articles in "Popular science monthly," vol. 66, pp. 243-255, 337-361, 531-537, arguing that certain social and political ills are not attributable to the immigrants, describing the method of inspection of immigrants, and advocating a standard of physique as an effective means of preventing undesirable immigration.

Immigration and the poorer classes in cities.—Hunter's "Poverty;" Riis's "The battle with the slums" and "How the other half lives." Consult also numerous articles in the periodical "Charities," published by the Charity organization society, New York.

Labor and immigration.—Adams and Sumner's "Labor problems;" "Social progress, a year book," 1904-1905; Warne's "The Slav invasion;" and Wright's "The influence of trade unions on immigrants" in the "Commons," vol. 10, pp. 303-307; and Massachusetts Bureau of labor report on "Race in industry," forming Senate doc. no. 27, 58th Cong., 1st session.

Method of dealing with immigrants.—Miss Jane Addams in the "Commons," vol. 10, pp. 9-19; J. H. Hoose, in "Education," vol. 25, pp. 269-278.

Immigrant question in Great Britain.—Boutmy's "The English people;" Bradshaw and Emanuel's "Alien immigration" (arguments pro and con); Buxton's "A handbook to political questions of the day;" C. Kinloch Cooke in the "Empire review," vol. 9, pp. 208-228, 436-460, vol. 10, pp. 1-10; Gordon's "The alien immigrant;" Schooling's "Foreigners in England" in the "Fortnightly review," vol. 76, pp. 880-894; and the reports of Parliamentary committees noted on pages 22-25 of this List.

German immigration.—Canstatt's "Die deutsche Auswanderung;" Schweffel's "Die Einwanderung in die Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika."

Italian immigration.—Bodio's "Notes sur la législation et la statistique comparées de l'émigration et de l'immigration;" Brandenburg's "Imported Americans" a record of experiences of one who assumed the character of an immigrant; the "Bolletino de l'emigrazione" published by the Italian emigration commission; Lord's "The Italian in America." The periodical "L'Italia coloniale" contains a number of important articles, written from the Italian standpoint. Two articles by Rambaud in the "Revue de Paris," June 1 and 15, 1905, are of exceptional interest. Among the discussions are McLaughlin's "Italian and other Latin immigrants," in "Popular science monthly," vol. 65, pp. 341-349; Jadot's "L'émigration italienne" in "Questions diplomatiques et coloniales," vol. 18, pp. 209-219; Speranza's "A mission of peace," in the "Outlook," vol. 78, pp. 128-131; Tosti's "Italy's attitude towards her immigrants," in "North American review," vol. 180, pp. 720-726; Robbins's "Italian to-day, American to-morrow," in the "Outlook," vol. 80, pp. 382-384.

Slavic immigration.—Warne's "The Slav invasion;" "The Slav in America," a symposium in "Charities" vol. 13, pp. 189-266; Kucera's "The Slavic races in Cleveland" in "Charities," vol. 13, pp. 377-378; Svarc's "The culture which the Slav offers America," in "Charities," vol. 14, pp. 875-881; Lovejoy's "The Slav child: a national asset or a liability," in "Charities," vol. 14, pp. 882-884.

Bibliography.—The Report of the British Board of trade, published 1898 (noted on page 22 of this List), contains a list of books on immigration into the United States.

Vol. 30 of the Special consular reports is on "Emigration to the United States" and compares present conditions with those of 1890, when F. L. Dingley made the report printed in Special consular reports, vol. 2.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE FIRST ISSUE.

The primary purpose of this List is to show material on the history of immigration to this country, with discussions on the economic influence of immigration. The List, however, takes in some works outside of this scope. This is a consequence of noting all the works contained in the section of the shelves devoted to immigration. There are therefore found treatises on emigration from one foreign country to another, as well as political and economic studies based on conditions abroad; handbooks issued by Western states to encourage settlement, which naturally are mere expositions of the resources of the states in question, etc.

The List, is arranged as follows:

List of books, 181 titles; References to articles in periodicals, 259; Congressional documents, 100; Reports of the Commissioner of immigration, etc., 50; Treasury department decisions, 31 entries; and Consular reports, 103 entries.

The history of Congressional investigation and legislation concerning immigration is summarized in Senate report no. 1333, 52d Congress, 2d session, which is a general report on proposed restriction of immigration. A list of Congressional documents from 1788-1903 is given on pp. 95-109 of this List. Prior to 1882 it was a question only of encouraging immigration. In that year a law was passed placing some restrictions on immigration. In 1883 a report was presented providing for a commission and joint commission on immigration. A report known as the "Ford committee report" which dealt with contract labor, etc., forms House report no. 3792 of the 50th Congress, 2d session. The testimony taken by the Committee was printed as House miscellaneous document no. 572 of the 50th Congress, 1st session. As a result of investigations in 1890 a voluminous report was published as House report no. 3472, 51st Congress, 2d session. In July, 1892, a report by a Committee which investigated the general subject of immigration and naturalization together with testimony taken was printed as House report no. 2090, 52d Congress, 1st session. The next important report is that issued as Senate report no. 1333, 52d Congress, 2d session. Senator Lodge's report, which advocated making illiteracy an obstacle to immigration, forms Senate report no. 290, 54th Congress, 1st session. The report on the McCall bill, which forbade the admittance of illiterate males over 16 years of age, is printed as House report no. 1079, 54th Congress, 1st session. The conference report on this bill forms Senate document no. 118, 54th Congress, 2d session. The veto of this bill is printed as Senate document no. 185 of the same session. In 1902 a lengthy report was made by the Senate committee on immigration, which with the testimony taken, was printed as Senate document no. 62, 57th Congress, 2d session. The Act of March 3, 1903, which is characterized as a systematic codification of the various laws relating to immigration, is printed in the Statutes at large, vol. 32, part 1, pp. 1213-1222. The text of the laws down to 1893 is contained in the Annual report of the United States superintendent of immigration for the year ending June 30, 1893. Various editions of the immigration laws are noted on page 29 of this List. A digest of immigration laws and decisions was published by the Bureau of immigration in 1899 as Treasury department document no. 2108. Vol. 15 of the Reports of the Industrial commission, chapter 11, is devoted to "Immigration legislation and its workings."

The laws of foreign countries regarding immigration are treated in Chandèze's "De l'intervention des pouvoirs publics dans l'émigration et l'immigration au XIX^e siècle." Vol. 15 of the Reports of the Industrial commission gives the English text of laws of foreign countries affecting immigration and emigration. Current statistics of immigration to the United States are given in the Reports of the Commissioner of immigration. General statistics of immigration of foreign population, based on census reports down to 1900, are given in vol. 15 of the Reports of the Industrial commission. Tabulated statistics showing the number, nationality, sex, age, occupation, and destination, from 1820-1903, are published in the "Monthly summary of commerce and finance" for June, 1903.

Richmond Mayo-Smith's "Emigration and immigration" is a general study of the history of the economic phases of immigration. This work is a summarized history of immigration, with chapters on the economic gain by immigration, the social effects of immigration, and restrictions of immigration, and discusses special methods of regulating immigration. "Immigration and its economic effects," based on a study of conditions in various industries, accompanied by papers on the foreign immigration in New York City and the agricultural distribution of immigrants, is treated at length by John R. Commons in vol. 15 of the Reports of the Industrial commission, pp. 293-743.

A statement of the investigation into the character of immigration made by consular officers of the United States is published in House executive document no. 157, 49th Congress, 2d session, and some of the papers contained in this document are reprinted in "Consular reports," vol. 22, no. 76, April, 1887.
