Dear Mr. Neely:

I return, with thanks, the manuscript of the translation of "The Right to Love." It is very well done. I have found it necessary to change but a few words. I beg to express to the translator my gratitude.

With regard to pirated editions of some of my earlier books, I thank you very much for your kind advice and am quite willing to leave matters entirely in your own hands.

You are on the spot and you know better than I the best course to take to defend my interests. By this time you know that "The Farce of Feeling" is the novel I call in English "The Comedy of Sentiment," for which we have already agreed as to the publication of an American edition by you.

Of my new novels you shall hear all particulars as soon as I think it desirable and advantageous to put them before the public.

With kindest regards I am,

Yours very sincerely,

To F. TENNYSON NEELY, Esq.,
