AMONGST the endless aches and pains to which the human frame is liable, there are few ailments entailing annoyances so great, or sufferings more acute, than those which attack the feet. Corns are the universal torment of mankind; and although in general held of no moment, and indeed exciting little or no sympathy, still they do wring a confession of pain by many an outward indication, from those who are ashamed to acknowledge it in words.

“Long corns and short shoes

To the enemies of Great Britain!”

was a standing toast during the Penin-
