THE HEPTAMERON

OF THE TALES OF

Margaret, Queen of Navarre

IN FIVE VOLUMES

VOLUME THE THIRD

The translation is from the authentic text of M. LE ROUX DE LINCY, and was first issued by the Society of English Bibliophilists in 1894.

The Essay by Professor GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A., is also given, and the whole of the important Notes and Appendices.

The Illustrations to the present translation are reproductions from the copperplates engraved for the Berne edition by LONGEUIL, HALBOU, and other eminent French artists of the eighteenth century.

CONTENTS OF VOLUME III.

	PAGE
TALE XIX. The honourable love of a gentleman, who, when his sweetheart is forbidden to speak with him, in despair becomes a monk of the Observance, while the lady, following in his footsteps, becomes a nun of St. Clara . . .	1
.. XX. How the Lord of Riant is cured of his love for a beautiful widow through surprising her in the arms of a groom	21

THIRD DAY.

PROLOGUE	33
TALE XXI. The affecting history of Rolandine, who, debarred from marriage by her father's greed, betrothes herself to a gentleman to whom, despite his faithlessness, she keeps her plighted word, and does not marry until after his death	35
.. XXII. How Sister Marie Heroet virtuously escapes the attempts of the Prior of St. Martin-in-the-Fields	73
.. XXIII. The undeserved confidence which a gentleman of Perigord places in the monks of the Order of St. Francis, causes the death of himself, his wife and their little child	97

	PAGE
TALE XXIV. Concerning the unavailing love borne to the Queen of Castile by a gentleman named Elisor, who in the end becomes a hermit	113
.. XXV. How a young Prince found means to conceal his intrigue with the wife of a lawyer of Paris	131
.. XXVI. How the counsels of a discreet lady happily withdrew the young Lord of Avannes from the perils of his foolish love for a lady of Pampeluna	143
.. XXVII. How the wife of a man who was valet to a Princess rid herself of the solicitations of one who was among the same Princess's servants, and at the same time her husband's guest	171
.. XXVIII. How a Gascon merchant, named Bernard du Ha, while sojourning at Paris, deceived a Secretary to the Queen of Navarre who had thought to obtain a pasty from him	177
.. XXIX. How the Priest of Carrelles, in Maine, when surprised with the wife of an old husbandman, gets out of the difficulty by pretending to return him a winnowing fan	185
.. XXX. How a gentleman marries his own daughter and sister unawares	191
