GAPLAND.

“ The nearest mountain air to the City of Washington is to be found on the Hagerstown branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Crampton's Gap, which is but one mile from the post office and railway station of Claggetts, Washington County, Maryland. The railway station is nearly nine hundred feet above tide, and the South Mountain is there ascended by an easy grade to its summit in the Gap, called Gapland. Across the Gap lies the famed Catoctin Valley, 'the Garden of Eden of the War.'

“ One mile from the Gap in this Valley, is the respectable village of Burkettsville. Within sight are several other towns. The Valley through which the railroad rises about one hundred feet to the mile, from the Potomac River to Claggetts, is called Pleasant Valley, and is overlooked on the west by the towering Elk Ridge, or Maryland Heights. From Gapland both Valleys are plain to see, as from his saddle the horseman gazes down on either hand. Antietam is only eight miles distant ; Harper's Ferry the same.

“ This exquisite country is nearly equidistant from Hagerstown, Frederick City and Charlestown, West Virginia, each two hours' drive by carriage. It is less than two hours' railway journey from Washington City, and several trains a day run both ways.”
