Preface

IN the following series of Meditations from the Psalms for Morning Service they are treated simply as devotional exercises ; much research therefore, or elucidation, will not be expected. We possess the admirable Commentaries of Bishop Horne upon the whole Psalter, and many upon single Psalms by men of eminent learning, and women of distinguished attainments, but none have produced from these glorious materials a book of devotions for the use of young people. Yet there are really no devotional exercises to be compared to the very Psalms themselves, and it is simply to point out this fact clearly to those who habitually read the Psalms without remarking it, that this little Book aspires.

There is always a danger of neglecting advantages which we seem to possess by nature as it were, and enjoy almost mechanically from our childhood, and thus even the words of the sweet Singer are not always as well known nor loved as they should be by those who read them daily.
