THIS little Story is adapted for young English Readers from an American book entitled "Little by Little," by Mr. William T. Adams. The incidents of the tale are only slightly altered; but it was thought that English boys would prefer to have the scene laid in their own country.

CHAPTER I.

PAUL DUNCAN DISOBEYS ORDERS.

I'LL give you a shilling, Paul, if you'll take me down to the Fort in your boat," said Thomas Nettle, as he came down to the beach where the boy he spoke to was hauling out an old dingy-looking boat.

"It blows too hard," replied Paul Duncan.

"The Club went down in their boat."

"But it didn't blow so hard then as it does now. It's a regular sou'easter."

"What are you afraid of, Paul?"

"I'm not afraid; but there's no use in risking one's life for a shilling."

"I'll give you half-a-crown, then."
