THE JAMES TEARE PRIZE ESSAY.

THE Committee acting on behalf of Mr. Teare's trustees, in giving the appended award of the Adjudicators, feel it due to a number of the competing writers, to state that the Adjudicators also expressed the opinion that several of the unsuccessful essays were of great value, and highly deserving of publication.

On opening the sealed communications, it was found that the writer of the essay to which the first prize had been awarded is Mr. Frederick Powell, of Newcastle, and the writer of the essay to which the second prize is awarded is the Rev. Dawson Burns, M.A., of London.

AWARD OF THE ADJUDICATORS.

WE, the undersigned, having been selected by the trustees of the late James Teare to act as adjudicators for the prizes left by him for the best essays on Temperance, unanimously agree that the first prize [of seventy guineas] be given to the writer of the essay bearing the title "Bacchus Dethroned."

We also agree that the second prize [of twenty guineas] be given to the writer of the essay having for its motto, "Hear me for my cause."
