

THE ELEMENTS OF GAELIC
GRAMMAR, BASED ON THE
WORK OF ALEXANDER
STEWART, D. D.

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649571543

The Elements of Gaelic Grammar, Based on the Work of Alexander Stewart, D. D. by H. Cameron Gillies

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

H. CAMERON GILLIES

THE ELEMENTS OF GAELIC
GRAMMAR, BASED ON THE
WORK OF ALEXANDER
STEWART, D. D.

THE ELEMENTS OF
GAELIC GRAMMAR

OTHER WORKS BY H. CAMERON GILLIES, M.D.

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF COUNTER-IRRITATION

Price 6s. nett.

'A valuable addition to the small number of books which are of practical use to surgeon and physician alike.'—Medical Times.

'Dr. Gillies is to be congratulated on his courage in producing such a work.'—Provincial Medical Journal.

'Certainly well worth reading by all who take a wide and philosophical view of the problems presented to them in their daily work.'—The Hospital.

'The profession owes a debt of gratitude to Dr. Gillies for his effort to place the widely used, and abused, practice of Counter-Irritation on a rational basis.'—Edinburgh Medical Journal.

THE INTERPRETATION OF DISEASE

Part I. The Meaning of Pain. Price 1s. nett.

.. II. The Lessons of Acute Disease. Price 1s. nett.

.. III. Rest. (in preparation.) Price 2s. nett.

'His treatise abounds in common sense.'—British Medical Journal.

'There is evidence that the author is a man who has not only read good books but has the power of thinking for himself, and of expressing the result of thought and reading in clear, strong prose. His subject is an interesting one, and full of difficulties both to the man of science and the moralist.'—National Observer.

'The busy practitioner will find a good deal of thought for his quiet moments in this work.'—The Hospital Gazette.

'Treated in an extremely able manner.'—The Bookman.

'The attempt of a clear and original mind to explain and profit by the lessons of Disease.'—The Hospital.

THE ELEMENTS OF
GAELIC GRAMMAR

BASED ON THE WORK OF THE
REV. ALEXANDER STEWART, D.D.

BY
H. CAMERON GILLIES, M.D.

LONDON
PUBLISHED BY DAVID NUTT
270-271 STRAND
1896

3275.11.45

←

066*-212

P R E F A C E

THE purpose of this Grammar is to afford assistance to such as may desire a living and intelligent acquaintance with the Gaelic language of Scotland. With this object in view, it was at first my settled intention to make little or no reference to the older language, but I soon found this to be impossible. An intelligent understanding of the Gaelic of the present day cannot be attained without some reference to the older language from which the later Grammatical forms had origin. There is no pretence to learning in these pages, nor any attempt even to indicate the results of modern Gaelic scholarship. I have admitted nothing which I did not believe would be helpful to the elementary student; and I hope my references will be found correct, and my inferences also correct and useful.

I have the advantage of being in touch with intelligent students of the language as their teacher, and I have made their actual difficulties guide me in everything. I hope I have been able in some degree to enlighten and to smooth their way, and that of others also who may undertake the same most interesting travel.

I followed the plan of Dr. Stewart's Grammar as closely as possible, feeling that I could not hope to improve upon it. I have also appropriated all of his work that I possibly could, even to his very words. Dr. O'Donovan—no mean authority—declared Stewart's Grammar to have been 'by far the most important work on Gaelic that ever appeared'; and I cannot express my admiration of it as I should wish. No one can ever clearly see or fully know the philosophical comprehensiveness and the artistic unity of this work, but one whose duty compels him to weigh and examine every word and line as I had to do. All that I claim is to have extended a little way into the light of to-day, the lines which Stewart laid down so well; and all I hope is that I have done so consistently and in some measure worthily.

I endeavoured to have special regard to the phonetic basis of the language and have always appealed to it whenever it was necessary to do so. It is from the speech-power of the organs of Voice that all speech-form proceeds. The written language is at best but an approximation to the spoken word, and the sense of Hearing comes as a not very stable or reliable medium between the Voice and the written Character. The principle of Aspiration which plays so important a part in Gaelic Grammar is based on phonetic expediency, so is Eclipsis, and so the Vowel law of Correspondence. No attention given to this aspect of the language is lost; without attention to it the language cannot be understood. But as my reference can only be partial and occasional I should wish all who may desire to know this aspect of Gaelic Grammar to refer to Mr. Mac-

Farlane's very useful work on The Phonetics of the Gaelic Language.

The division of Nouns into three Declensions is different from all previous classifications. My departure from Stewart's philosophical arrangement I wish to justify by the explanation following :

The method I worked upon was by Exclusion.

1. The great class of Abstract Nouns in achd, and those in e and ad of Comparative forms, which have no inflection, were thrown out.

2. Such Nouns as are indeclinable in the Singular—all Nouns ending in a Vowel—were next taken as the First Declension.

3. Of Nouns ending in a Consonant it was found that a great number had a distinct inflection forming a Genitive in i. This class was made the Second Declension. It always has the characteristic Vowel Broad.

4. Nouns ending in a Consonant and having a Small Vowel characteristic were made the Third Declension.

But it was found that a considerable number of Nouns remained, which though ending in a Consonant and having a Broad characteristic, were not declined in the Singular. This class must form a Fourth Declension or be included in the First. I have preferred the latter alternative as being the more simple way.

Regarding this classification it is to be remarked that Nouns of the Second Declension are so peculiarly distinct from all others, that they must form a class by themselves. There can be no question regarding them.

It may be said that the First and Third might be put