"This Edition has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date. It contains 60 pages of Preliminary Matter and 728 of Text and Index. Although so largely increased in bulk, the price is the same as hitherto, and it can still be described as a "Handy Book," though we should imagine that the 30th edition, if not the 28th or 29th, will finally remove it from the category of volumes which can be carried in an overcoat pocket. For the rest, the book is like good wine, in that it needs no bush; and is also unlike good wine, in that extended acquaintance tends to clear the head of the man who seeks its aid, rather than to obscure his judgment."—Financial News.

(BOUND IN ONE VOLUME WITH THE SUPPLEMENT.)

This Work is based upon the very thorough and up-to-date methods in operation in the GLASGOW CORPORATION TRAMWAYS DEPARTMENT, and will be of considerable service to TRAMWAY OFFICIALS and others interested in Tramways both here and in America. The entire System of Accounting is clearly and fully described, and facsimiles of all the Books and Forms recommended are given.

THE SUPPLEMENT.

The main object of the supplement is to indicate some improvements which the Author was led to make whilst organising, in a foreign city, a system of tramway accounting, adapted to local conditions, and sufficiently simple to be easily carried out by a native staff.

He was enabled to secure greater directness, and actually to obtain better results with less labour than is involved in carrying out the methods described in "Tramway Bookkeeping and Accounts."

Later experience (of railways) in this country has confirmed the value of these improvements.

EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THE object of the series of handbooks that is being published under heading of THE ACCOUNTANTS' LIBRARY is to provide, at a reasonable price, detailed information as to the most approved methods of keeping accounts in relation to all the leading classes of industry whose books call for more or less specialised treatment. No such series has hitherto been attempted; but there exist, of course, numerous separate works dealing with the accounts of one particular class of undertaking. These separate works are, however, for the most part either too expensive, or too superficial to answer the purpose that is particularly aimed at by THE ACCOUNTANTS' LIBRARY, which is intended to supply the student with that specialised information which he may require, while at the same time affording to the trader, banker, or manufacturer who is not in a position to secure the fullest information for his purpose, knowledge which can hardly fail to be of the very greatest assistance to him in the correct keeping of his accounts, upon a system specially adapted to his requirements, and therefore involving a minimum expenditure of labour. It is expected that the series will also be found of material assistance to bookkeepers of all classes.

Without aiming at giving an exhaustive account of the manner in which each separate business is conducted, the technical points in connection with each industry will receive as much attention as is necessary in order fully to elucidate the system of accounts advocated, while each volume will be the work of one who has made that particular class of accounts more or less a speciality. It is obvious, however, that to enable the necessary ground to be covered in the space available, it is incumbent to assume upon the part of the reader a certain knowledge of general bookkeeping. The extent of the knowledge assumed will vary according to the nature of the class of accounts considered. For example, in the volumes on "Bank Accounts" and "Shipping Accounts," a thorough acquaintance with ordinary double-entry bookkeeping is not unnaturally assumed; but in the case, for instance, of "Auctioneers' Accounts," "Domestic Tradesmen's Accounts," and other similar volumes, such explanations are included as will enable the ordinarily intelligent reader fully to grasp the methods described, even although his knowledge of bookkeeping may be of an elementary description. These explanations are, doubtless, superfluous as far as accountants are concerned, but are necessary to make the volumes of value to the majority of those specially engaged in these particular industries.

To subscribers for the whole series it may be added that, when completed, it will form a most valuable and practically complete library, dealing, at the hands of specialists, with practically every class of accounts, and illustrating the application
