In this series we have a compact but popular presentation of the highly important results of recent archaeological investigation. The annals of Egypt, Assyria and Persia, as derived from the monuments and from the cuneiform inscriptions generally, are of the greatest importance to understanding the development of human civilization and the tendency of religious thought. Besides this there has been brought out a mass of evidence and illustration on manners and customs, language and literature, tending to throw light on the earlier books of the Bible, a knowledge of which is indispensable to every well-informed man. This has heretofore been practically inaccessible because of the recondite manner in which it has been discussed. Each of these volumes has been prepared by specialists who are masters of their respective departments.
