PREFACE.

It is now seventeen years since the last General Index to the Archæologia Cambrensis, by Archdeacon D. R. Thomas, was published, and, as a result, it is a work of time to discover any particular reference after 1883, when the Fourth Series terminated. It was this inconvenience which led me to commence an Index for the Fifth Series, originally for my private use. The work has been brought down to the end of that Series, and it has been suggested that its publication would be appreciated by other members of the Association. I have, with pleasure, acceded to the desire that it should be published.

The Index, it should be mentioned, does not profess to give a reference to every single name. To have carried it out on those lines would have taken far more time than was at my disposal. It is, however, sufficiently full for all general purposes; and I trust that the Volume, the compilation of which has entailed no little work, will prove as useful to my fellow members as it has already proved to myself.
