

ELEMENTARY MORAL
LESSONS: FOR SCHOOLS
AND FAMILIES

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649570577

Elementary Moral Lessons: For Schools and Families by M. F. Cowdery

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

M. F. COWDERY

ELEMENTARY MORAL
LESSONS: FOR SCHOOLS
AND FAMILIES

o

ELEMENTARY .

M O R A L L E S S O N S ,

FOR

SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES.

BY

M. F. COWDERY,

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS, SANDUSKY, OHIO.

The Good alone are Great.

PHILADELPHIA:

H. COWPERTHWAIT & CO.

1856.

2 Nov. 1893

From the Library of
REV. S. LONGFELLOW. 83

Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1856, by
M. F. COWDERY,
In the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

STEREOTYPED BY J. FAGAN. PRINTED BY SMITH & PETERS.

PREFACE.

IN the preparation of a series of volumes on Moral Instruction for the use of classes in schools, the following positions are assumed:

First—That an important department of education—that which relates to social duties and moral obligations—is at present, to a large extent, neglected.

Second—That, in conducting the work of moral culture with children, important principles and precepts need illustration and exemplification by real and supposed instances of conformity to them, or departure from them, as well as, and as much as, propositions in mathematics, or the other sciences.

It would be quite an uninteresting, if not a repulsive exercise, for the teacher to assure and re-assure his pupils that the “product of the means would always equal the product of the extremes” in a proportion, and then leave them to grope their way through the application of the principle without further illustration or aid from the skill and resources of the teacher, or from the storehouse of human wisdom.

Is it any more rational to teach, or rather, to tell a child, that "virtue leads to happiness," or that "sincerity and truth form the basis of every virtue," and then leave him to ascertain the truth of these propositions by bitter experience, and perhaps, a life of disappointment, humiliation and sorrow? Is it not better to present to the intellect and to the sensibilities of a child, during all the early years of his life, such rich, varied, living exemplifications of specific virtues, as shall lead him to love, and aid him to practise, the same virtues?

Third—Reason and experience unite in demanding that moral culture for the child, the youth, or the adult, should receive a portion of time and attention EVERY DAY. It would be quite appropriate, also, to add, that this labor should stand first in the order of importance, that the highest skill of the teacher should be expended here, and that parents, school authorities and society, should unite in demanding of every teacher both personal moral worth, and the ability to promote the growth of the moral nature of others, as a pre-requisite to all other qualities and attainments in his profession as a teacher.

Fourth—It is assumed and thoroughly believed, that moral culture, to such an extent as to enlist the sympathies, form the early sentiments, and, in a great degree to control the motives and conduct, is entirely practicable in a regular course of Common School instruction. The objections which are supposed to exist to the introduction of this subject to all classes of pupils, have little or no foundation in reality. The difficulty lies in the want of proper love for the subject, or the requisite skill, or the necessary prudence, or the proper aids in this work, on the part of the teacher. It is claimed that a text-book, and preparation of lessons, and a regular time for recitation, are as necessary here as in arithmetic. Any instruction given upon important subjects, should be regular and systematic. Why should it not be so in moral instruction ?

The present volume is intended to aid teachers in a general presentation of those common virtues and duties which require very early attention. It is also intended as an introduction to a more full discussion and a more close practical application of right principles to motives and conduct, in two subsequent volumes.

It is recommended that, in addition to the regular preparation of each lesson by the pupil, that the narratives should be occasionally read by the class, or, what is usually still better, that some pupil, or pupils, be selected to give from memory, the principal incidents of each of the narratives introduced. The sympathies thereby awakened, and the general impression made will often, in this way, be considerably increased.

It will, of course, be presumed, that the thoughtful teacher will present other questions than such as may be found in the book, and, thereby, more completely adapt instruction to the wants and capacities of his or her pupils.

It would be highly gratifying to the author to be able to give proper credits for all the narratives introduced in the present volume, but as they have been selected from a great variety of sources, during several years of reading and experience, and, in many cases, where the original source could not be well ascertained, the credits are, principally omitted.

SANDUSKY, March 1, 1856.

CONTENTS.

	Page
PREFACE,	3
LESSON I. Do unto others as you would have others do to you,	9
II. Repay all injuries with kindness,	19
III. A little wrong done to another is great wrong done to ourselves,	28
IV. The noblest courage is the courage to do right	35
V. Be slow to promise, but sure to perform	44
VI. Honor thy father and thy mother	51
VII. Think the truth,—speak the truth,—act the truth,	62
VIII. Do good to all as you have opportunity,	71
IX. Speak evil of no one,	79
X. Carefully listen to conscience, and always obey its commands,	87
XI. We must forgive all injuries as we hope to be for- given,	96
XII. Learn to help one another,	105
XIII. The greatest conqueror is the self-conqueror,	112
XIV. Swear not at all,	119
XV. Be faithful to every trust,	128
XVI. Be neat,	130
XVII. Right actions should spring from right motives	135
XVIII. Labor conquers all things,	148
XIX. Be honest in "little things," upright in all things	152
XX. A person is known by the company he keeps,	160