

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS; THE
FACTORS INVOLVED AND THE
METHODS PURSUED IN CREDIT
OPERATIONS. A PRACTICAL TREATISE
BY EMINENT CREDIT MEN; PP. 1-194

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649557578

Credits and Collections; The Factors Involved and the Methods Pursued in Credit Operations. A Practical Treatise by Eminent Credit Men; pp. 1-194 by T. J. Zimmerman

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

T. J. ZIMMERMAN

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS; THE
FACTORS INVOLVED AND THE
METHODS PURSUED IN CREDIT
OPERATIONS. A PRACTICAL TREATISE
BY EMINENT CREDIT MEN; PP. 1-194

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS

THE FACTORS INVOLVED AND THE
METHODS PURSUED IN CREDIT
OPERATIONS. A PRACTICAL TREA-
TISE BY EMINENT CREDIT MEN

Collected and Edited by

T. J. ZIMMERMAN

SECOND EDITION

THE SYSTEM COMPANY
CHICAGO
1904

Copyright, 1904, by
The System Company

PREFACE

American business men hold that the only way to learn to do things is to do them. This opinion has had much truth and fact to justify it, but it has been undergoing a marked transformation in the past decade. For men are coming to realize that, although no one can learn to do a thing by merely being told how it is done, such precious knowledge greatly facilitates his learning how to do it when once he gets into practical work. It affords him a strong foundation, barren and useless in itself, but a firm basis upon which to build the structure of business experience. Book learning, abstract knowledge, is like a fertilizer: it does not, of itself, produce anything, but it stimulates growth and advance when the live seed, practical experience, is instilled in the soil of work.

There is another feature in modern commercial life which has stimulated the output of business literature. Association for the accomplishment of common purposes is having an always greater impetus, and it has been accompanied by another kind of co-operation—the give and take of business ideas and knowledge.

In other words, business men are realizing that no one man can know all; that every man can make a profitable exchange by giving his knowledge and experience for that of others. For while he gives the knowledge of one man, and that without taking anything away from himself, he receives in return the ideas and information of many. The business principle, "that exchange is the best which gives both parties the largest possible profit," has been found as successful in the exchange of knowledge as of commodities.

J 9.11.25

P. O. No. 2-A-1-29 M.V.P.

These two tendencies in modern commercial life have led to the projection of the "Business Man's Library," of which this book is the first volume. The foregoing analysis of these tendencies also serves to point out the purpose of the whole series and of this first book. It is to tell the "how" of things: the technique of commercial operations, the specific processes and actual methods necessary for the accomplishment of certain work. And this all is told, these processes are described and these methods discussed, by business men actually engaged in this line of work—men who have performed these acts, who have originated and used these methods, who know because they do. This series of books is intended, therefore, to teach the beginner the fundamentals and detailed methods of practical business operations, and to give him who has been long in the harness new ideas for application in his own business.

Literature on the subject of credits and collections is very meager. This is due to the fact that only recently has this work been recognized as a distinct and worthy department of business. Mr. P. R. Earling, who contributes the able introductory chapter of this book, was the first man to call attention to the importance of this subject, in his work, "Whom To Trust," published in 1890. This book focused attention upon credits. The suggestions laid down in it were largely followed and business houses began to recognize the significance of credits and collections.

Mr. Earling carried credits to a plane a step higher when in 1893 he organized, under the auspices of the World's Fair Auxiliary Congress, the congress on "Credits, Collections and Failures," of which he was chairman. This congress had representation from business houses not only of America, but also of foreign countries. The most important work which it did was to stimulate the formation of credit men's associations in the principal cities of this country and to encourage through these associations the dissemination of knowledge upon credits and collections.

"Credits and Collections" attempts to give a complete treatment of the subject of conducting credits and making collections, and to that end is divided into three parts.

The first part treats of the general function of a credit department, its place in business and its relations to the other commercial operations; it discusses the general management of credits and collections and the organization of a credit department, analyzes the factors involved, and describes the tools at the disposal of the credit man in his work.

In the second part, the subject is divided and considered as to the different lines of business in which credit operations play an important part. Here is described in detail the management and conduct of a credit department in various classes of business, and actual specific methods of carrying on credit and collection operations.

In the third part are described in detail actual systems now in use for conducting credit departments in all lines of business, fully illustrated with reproductions of such blanks and forms as may appear in keeping the accounts and records of the department.

The unflinching courtesy and willingness to give suggestions and help, which the editor met in the preparation of this work, make the usual conventional task of thanking those to whom he is indebted especially pleasant. To the business men and credit managers who have contributed the chapters which make up this book, thanks are due, not only for the time and careful thought which they put into the preparation of this work, but also for the encouragement and careful advice they gave the editor. More specifically, the editor wishes to thank Mr. P. R. Earling, the Nestor of Chicago's credit men, Mr. Dorchester Mapes and Mr. Berthold E. Borges, for their valuable advice and for their assistance in reading the proof sheets of the book, and Mr. John Griggs, secretary of the Chicago Credit Men's Association, for his many suggestions.

THE EDITOR.

Chicago, June 1, 1904.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Part I—THE COMPONENT PARTS AND FACTORS OF A CREDIT DEPARTMENT

		Page
Chapter I.	The general function and work of a credit department..... Peter R. Easting, Vice-President of L. Gould & Co.	1
Chapter II.	The organization and management of a credit department..... Dorchester Mapes, President of The Dorchester Mapes Co.	19
Chapter III.	The characteristics of a good credit man..... F. F. Peabody, Vice-President of Chase, Peabody & Co.	28
Chapter IV.	The function and work of a commercial agency..... T. J. Zimmerman	36
Chapter V.	The interchange of ledger experience..... H. A. Wheeler, Vice-President of The Credit Clearing House	49
Chapter VI.	Credit leverage—its purpose and worth..... T. J. Zimmerman	65
Chapter VII.	Correspondency in the credit department..... N. M. Trison of Langley, Low & Alexander	77

Part II—THE MANAGEMENT OF CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS IN DIFFERENT CLASSES OF BUSINESS

Chapter VIII.	Credit and collections in a wholesale house..... Edward M. Skinner of Wilson Bros.	85
Chapter IX.	Credit and collections in a manufacturing house..... Berthold E. Burgin of The Sherwin-Williams Co.	102
Chapter X.	Credit and collections in a retail house..... J. A. McConnell of H. G. Soltridge & Co.	124
Chapter XI.	Credit and collections in an installment home..... E. F. Kennedy, President of The Kennedy Furniture Co.	135
Chapter XII.	Credit and collections in foreign trade..... John E. Gardin of The City National Bank, New York	142

Part III—COMPLETE SYSTEMS IN ACTUAL OPERATION FOR CONDUCTING CREDIT DEPARTMENTS

Chapter XIII.	A system for conducting the credits of a wholesale house..... F. E. French of J. V. Farwell & Co.	151
Chapter XIV.	A credit and collection system for a manufacturing house..... W. S. Terrell of The Simmons Manufacturing Co.	158
Chapter XV.	A system for the credit department of a retail house..... As used in Chicago's Department Store	173
Chapter XVI.	A credit and collection system for an installment house..... Henry Marcus of Spiegel's House Furnishing Co.	185
Chapter XVII.	A credit and collection system for a retail house..... C. C. Parsons of The Shaw-Walker Co.	101