PREFACE.

THE following LECTURES are intended for Students in Logics and Ethics in Trinity College. They are all grounded on the fact familiar to anyone that understands Plato or Hegel, that all knowledge involves two opposite elements—never separate, and always distinct. This is seldom seen even by professed mentalists. Until it is, Philosophy is impossible. The Student must cry—νοῦν ἢ βρόχον.

9, TRINITY COLLEGE,

September 21, 1885.
