A Confession and a Claim

The spontaneous appearance of two little books of verse, by Althea A. Ogden and Evelyn H. Walker, prompts this confession and claim from the minister of All Souls Church, Chicago. Many if not most of these lines were written at his invitation or perchance compulsion; a benignant one, let us hope. Hence this prompt assumption on his part of the responsibility for the writing and publicity. This confession justifies a claim to a part of whatever credit these modest songs of faith, courage, and hope may receive. They come from hearts in league with a searching eye and an open mind, and will appeal to other hearts thus re-inforced. Others have given generously of things their hands have accumulated, but these women have given of the rarer, higher, and more essential accumulations of soul; for the Lincoln Centre, like Thebes, was reared by the power of the Poet's Lyre.

Were outside evidence needed to prove what is so apparent in the lines themselves, the undersigned would gladly testify that they have proved themselves to be veritable "Altar-side Messages" and "Bugle Notes of Courage and Love." These singers of the new day and the free faith have helped to keep the fires burning on the altar for most of the three decades that have measured the ministry of him who, on the thirtieth anniversary of the church he founded, asks for no clearer interpretation of his words or higher demonstration of his works than those found in these two books of verse for these women have told in measured lines much that the minister has tried to say in prose.

To

My beloved sister "Emmy"

Who would gather a flower where no one else could see one growing

She said, "There's nothing I can do
To help the world along,—
I am so weak,—and just know how
To make a little song."

She made the song and in it put
Her heart's full strength, and lo!
One whispered, "It has lifted me
From out a depth of woe!"
