

THE CHICKENS OF FOWL
FARM: A STORY

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649262595

The Chickens of Fowl Farm: A Story by Lena E. Barksdale

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

LENA E. BARKSDALE

THE CHICKENS OF FOWL
FARM: A STORY

Bought of A. F. Hunter, Abington, Mass.
May, 1912 by G. M. C.

THE CHICKENS OF FOWL FARM

Property of JOURNAL PUB. CO.
RELIABLE POULTRY Library

BY

LENA E. BARKSDALE

KODAK ILLUSTRATIONS BY THE AUTHRESS

PUBLISHED BY
ALLEN, LANE & SCOTT
PHILADELPHIA
1898

PREFACE.

I have written this little chicken book in the past few months, and now on my eleventh birthday the story is finished.

The "other critters" have talked to the world through "Uncle Remus." The horses through "Black Beauty"; now I wish to give the chickens a chance.

Most of them I write of are members of my own family, so I know them well.

L. E. B.

AUGUST 22d, 1898.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for ensuring the integrity and transparency of the financial system.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It highlights the need for consistent and reliable data sources to support the analysis.

3. The third part of the document describes the process of identifying and measuring the impact of different factors. It notes that this process is complex and requires careful attention to detail.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the challenges associated with interpreting the results of the analysis. It points out that there are many factors that can influence the outcome, and it is important to consider these factors when drawing conclusions.

5. The fifth part of the document provides a summary of the findings and offers recommendations for future research. It suggests that further studies should be conducted to explore the relationship between the variables in more detail.

6. The sixth part of the document concludes the report and expresses the hope that the findings will be useful to the readers. It also thanks the individuals and organizations that supported the research.

THE CHICKENS OF FOWL FARM.

CHAPTER FIRST.

A TALK IN THE CHICKENYARD.

"Why is it, I would like to know," said young Scratchfoot, throwing the sand over himself, "that every one is talking and carrying on of a hot Summer day the very time you ought to go to sleep?"

"Hush up, Scratchfoot," said Topknot, "we are having a very lively conversation. Uncle Red Nose Mike has just asked a riddle, which none of us can guess. But you can, so get up and try."

Scratchfoot yawned and then said, "Mr. Mike, what is your riddle? I will try my hand at it. What is it?"

"What kind of a cravat would our friend Mr. Hog be most likely to choose?" said Red Nose

Mike, then added: "I have offered a prize of those six worms I found just now to the one that tells me what it is."

HEN CASTLE.

"That is very easy. Have these people, sensible too they call themselves, been trying so long to guess that riddle? Hand over your worms, Mr. Mike, for I know it," said Scratchfoot after a little thought.

.. I 9 V M

"The worms come after the riddle," said Mike.

"The answer is a pig's tie."

"Right, and here are the worms!"

Then after receiving many congratulations Scratchfoot ate the worms.

LATER, IN THE HENHOUSE.

"Mrs. Henny Penny, why do you insist on sitting on your nest forever? It is so pleasant outdoors; you might be fattening on worms instead of up here on your nest as if you were glued to it," said Scratchfoot.

"My dear, I see you do not understand."

"No, I don't understand, and only silly people say there is anything to understand in it," said Scratchfoot, interrupting Henny Penny.

"Dear, you said awhile ago that no one ought to stay in this fine weather, so I wish you would please go out."

After giving her a peck Scratchfoot left the house.

CHAPTER SECOND.

DEATH OF SCRATCHFOOT.

“O! Mr. Mike, what is that noise? O! O! Mr. Mike, it is Scratchfoot; he has fallen. See, Mr. Mike,” said Brownie, one of the hens at Fowl Farm.

Red Nose Mike flew down on the floor of the henhouse. Then he gave a cry that waked all the chickens. He said, “Ladies and gentlemen, please all get together and listen to this sad news I have to tell you.”

All the people assembled, and Red Nose Mike said—

“Knowing as I do that young Scratchfoot, of our beloved Fowl Farm, has gotten up such a reputation, not only for finding the nicest, fattest worms, not only for guessing riddles or telling the best stories, but for fighting off any rooster that does harm to the people, I wish to break the dreadful news as best I can that Scratchfoot is dead!”