WHOSE LIFE ALWAYS SPEAKS PEACE

FOREWORD

A RECENT book of biography gives a telling contrast between one who "sought under the clouds for the last voiceless inspiration," and another who "looked oftener at the brown earth than at the blue sky." Always the peaceful face of the one who looked aloft was an inspiration to those who knew him, but few cared to stay long in the company of the other, whose spirits were ever in hearty accord with his drooping shoulders.

The writer has endeavored to present a plain record of some of those who have learned how easy it is to forget the brown earth while they look at the blue sky; who, by the simple means at the command of every one, not only win victory for themselves but bring brightness into the lives of others; who are proving daily that man is able to walk with head erect, eyes facing the light, and heart turned toward God.

Grateful acknowledgment is made to the authors and publishers of books named in the Bibliography for inspiration and quotations.
