INTRODUCTION.

The poverty of our national literature, in works of Ecclesiastical History, has long been universally confessed and lamented. But if the history of our country, its civil institutions and its military exploits, be interesting to us, and considered worthy of our study and research,-the history of the kingdom of the Church of Christ, can certainly not be less so to those, whose glory and happiness it is to number themselves amongst its Its first beginnings, small as the members. mustard seed-the rude storms whichs wept over it, whilst it was yet a tender plant-its growth into the strong and vigorous tree: or, in other words, the institution of the Church, the severe combats which were waged against it, in its first ages, by pagan persecution, by heresy and schism, over all which it gloriously triumphed-because the gates of hell could not prevail against it-are subjects well worthy of the attention and meditation of the Christian.
