PREFACE TO UNCLE JOHN'S THIRD BOOK.

DEAR LITTLE CHILDREN :

HAVE you read Uncle John's First and Second Books? Have you looked at all the pretty pictures, and learned all the stories about them? Has your dear mother, sister, or aunt taken you upon her knee, and read to you all the little tales which are in the books, or are you such good studious children, that you can take a book yourself and read, when there are no long words to twist up your dear little tongues, and puzzle your dear little brains? Perhaps you have read the two volumes through many times, till you can tell the story to every picture to your baby brothers and sisters. If so, I am sure you are ready for some new tales and pictures, tales full of sweet thoughts, and words to make you love gentleness and truth, pictures that will teach you something new worth learning. And so, knowing that to a good child there is no present so valuable as a new book, Uncle John offers you his Third Book, full of fresh stories and pictures. As he hopes you have studied hard, and learned many things since you read his last book, he has given you a few harder words and longer sentences, to try your scholarship. Promising that if you like his third book, he will not forget you, but soon give you a still newer one, he signs himself,

UNCLE JOHN.
