THE FOLK LORE

BY THE
REV. CHARLES SWAINSON, M.A.,
RECTOR OF OLD CHARLTON;
Author of "A Handbook of Weather Folk Lore."

LONDON:

P R E F A C E.

I N submitting this work to the members of the Folk Lore Society, and to the public, my object has been to gather from various quarters the provincial names of our wild British birds (all notices of domesticated species, being omitted), as well as the popular sayings and superstitions attached to them, illustrating these, if possible, by references to similar beliefs prevalent among other nations.

I have endeavoured to model it, however imperfectly, on the invaluable volumes of M. Rolland, "La Faune Populaire de la France," following the classification, and adopting the nomenclature, used in the "List of British Birds compiled by a Committee of the British Ornithologists' Union. London, 1883."

I must express my most sincere thanks to Mr. J. A. Harvie Brown for the help he so kindly afforded in allowing me to make use of his MS. list of the provincial names of Scotch birds, also for many useful suggestions and corrections; and to Mr. Gomme for the courtesy and consideration he has shown in many ways, especially in his revision of the proofs.

I may add that the completion of the work has been unavoidably delayed from several causes, one of which has been my own ill-health.

CHARLES SWAINSON.

THE RECTORY,
OLD CHARLTON.
