FOREWORD	1
Consumption (some phases) is curable, but conditions cannot be ignored.—Ignorance too often fatal.—Advice of the home physician must frequently be modified, owing to local conditions.—A "fight to a finish."
CHAPTER
I. INTRODUCTION	7
Not an argument for emigration; the physician to take that responsibility.—Purpose, to give an insight into conditions in the West.—Difficulty of finding the desired information.—Going unprepared.—Thousands of benefited persons.—Plain speaking desirable.—No alchemy in "climate."—The real virtues for healing.—Climate but another name for opportunity.—Those who fail, and why.—Desperate cases sometimes saved.—Realization of danger a safeguard.—Courage essential.—Aids to the enemy.—A year to become well.—A limited income.—Charitable help avoidable.—Moral responsibility of the physician.—Fifty dollars per month for comfort.—Not hopeless for the poor man, if not too ill.
II. THE BEGINNING OF A HOPE	20
How the author got out of his doldrums.—The journey westward
