An Essay in Prose and Verse

BY

JOHN CHARLES EARLE, B.A.

‘What are the laws of nature? To me, perhaps, the rising of one from the dead were no violation of these laws, but a confirmation; were some far deeper law, now first penetrated into, and by spiritual force, even as the rest have all been, brought to bear on us with its material force’—Sartor Resartus, iii. 8

NOTE.

THE FOLLOWING ESSAY was printed by the Author in the early part of 1876 and circulated chiefly among private friends. Being afterwards published, he was encouraged by the result to enlarge it considerably, so that it can now scarcely be regarded as the same work. The prose part is nearly trebled in length, and he has added some minor poems on the same subject as the Essay, a few of which have already appeared in print.

October 1876.
