| against his Enemies, must, as far as possible, lay aside all Agitation and Anxiety of Mind . | 86 |
| XXVI. What we must do when we are Wounded . | 91 |
| XXVII. Of the order which the Devil observes in his Assaults and Stratagems against those who give themselves to a Holy Life, and against those who are already found in the Bondage of Sin . | 94 |
| XXVIII. Of the Assaults and Devices which the Devil em- ploys against those who are held in the Bond- age of Sin . | 95 |
| XXIX. Of the Wiles and Delusions by which the Devil holds captive those who are conscious of their Misery, and desire to be free; and how it is our Resolutions are so often fruitless . | 96 |
| XXX. Of the Delusion of those who imagine that they are going on to Perfection . | 99 |
| XXXI. Of the Devil's Deceits and Struggles to draw us away from the Path of Perfection . | 101 |
| XXXII. Of the last above-named Assault and Stratagem, whereby the Devil tries to make the Virtues we have acquired the Occasions of our Ruin . | 106 |
| XXXIII. Of certain Suggestions for overcoming our evil Passions, and gaining new Virtues . | 115 |
| XXXIV. That Virtues are to be gained by degrees; by Exercising ourselves in their gradual forma- tion, and that our Attention must first be given to one step, and then to another . | 119 |
| XXXV. Of the means by which Virtues are acquired, and of the way we should Use them, allowing some space of Time to one Virtue only . | 121 |
| XXXVI. That in the Exercise of Virtue we must continually Advance with Diligence . | 124 |
| XXXVII. That as we must always continue in the Exercise | |
