NOTE BY THE AUTHOR.

SUPPOSING it may be interesting to curious readers to know how a sailor's feelings and fancies run in his wide intercourse with nature, — especially one with a rhyming tendency, — and because it happens that such an experience is seldom heard through the press, I have selected a portion of my sonnets and other poems, written during long whaling voyages, years ago, for amusement and pastime (crude and strange as they are), to which I have added others of later date, which together compose the contents of this volume.
