P R E F A C E

TO-DAY brings to a close ten years of a happy ministry as Rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, and I thought I might be permitted to commemorate it by gathering together ten sermons—the same number as the years. Which to choose of the hundreds I have preached was a task I did not care to undertake. The simplest way seemed the best. The ten last sermons I have preached are here printed. With the exception of the last, all are from the stenographic notes made at the time of their delivery. They lack the literary finish that the printed page presupposes, but it may be that in this rough form they will accomplish their purpose—serve as a memorial of plain speech from a loving heart.
