

NONCONFORMITY: ITS ORIGIN AND PROGRESS

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649371662

Nonconformity: its origin and progress by W. B. Selbie

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

W. B. SELBIE

NONCONFORMITY: ITS ORIGIN AND PROGRESS

HOME
UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
OF MODERN KNOWLEDGE

Editors:

HERBERT SEHR, M.A., F.B.A.

PROF. GILBERT MURRAY, D.LITT.,
LL.D., F.B.A.

PROF. J. ARTHUR THOMSON, M.A.

PROF. WILLIAM T. BREWSTER, M.A.
(Columbia University, U.S.A.)

NEW YORK
HENRY HOLT AND COMPANY

NON-CONFORMITY
ITS ORIGIN AND PROGRESS

BY
W. B. SELBIE, M.A., D.D.
PRINCIPAL OF MANFIELD COLLEGE
OXFORD

LONDON
WILLIAMS AND NORGATE

Printed by
MORRISON & GIBB LIMITED
Edinburgh

CONTENTS

CHAP.	PAGE
I THE BEGINNINGS	7
II THE ANGLICAN SETTLEMENT AND THE PURITAN REACTION	24
III THE SEPARATISTS	43
IV LAUD AND THE PURITANS	60
V PRESBYTERIANS AND INDEPENDENTS	76
VI THE QUAKERS	95
VII THE RESTORATION	114
VIII THE REVOLUTION	134
IX REACTION AND DECLINE	152
X THE REVIVAL	171
XI PROGRESS AND CONSOLIDATION	198
XII THE PRESENT TIME	225
BIBLIOGRAPHY	252
INDEX	254

NONCONFORMITY : ITS ORIGIN AND PROGRESS

CHAPTER I

THE BEGINNINGS

THE rise of Nonconformity in England was due to a great variety of causes. Some of these were local and occasional in their operation, while others of them may be said to be universal and permanent. These have to do with the very nature of the Christian religion, and with the special genius of the British people. As early as the beginning of the fourteenth century, when the people of this country were nominally all of one faith, there were many signs that the uniformity was by no means so complete as it seemed. Saxon and Norman were not yet fused into one race. The Normans loved the ornate and splendid ritual of the Roman Church, but the Saxons were a plainer folk and preferred a simpler worship. The distinction between the two peoples corresponded roughly to the distinction between aristocrats and democrats. The average monk or priest was an aristocrat by birth, training and association. He was not of the common people, nor was he on their side in the hour of their need. This helps to explain what happened at the Coming of the Friars. The people responded eagerly to the call of these priests, who were ready to share their lot and to speak in their tongue. The Friars had the Pope's licence to preach either in sacred buildings or in the open air, and they freely availed themselves of the privilege. Their coming wrought something like a religious revolution. With their coarse wit and homely speech they brought religion home to the men in the street, and created an ideal of religious service which did not increase the popularity of those idle shepherds who devoured their flocks instead of feeding them. The Friars were, of course, loyal sons of Rome, and there is no trace of heresy or disaffection in their preaching. But, for all that, they prepared the way for Wyclif and the Lollards, and for that temper of mind which will not always yield to authority, but loves to exercise an independent judgment in matters of religion.

It is not surprising, therefore, that even before Wyclif's day signs of revolt against the dominant Church should be not infrequently forthcoming. They were confined at first to a few obscure people, and were easily