PREFACE.

It is related of an individual who attempted to read through a book on Moral Science that he wrote the following verse on the flyleaf:—

If there should be another flood,
For refuge hither fly;
Though all the world should be submerged,
This book would still be dry.

It is the humble hope of the author of this volume that none will find it "dry." It treats a live, throbbing question. The names attached to the "contributed" articles are a sufficient guarantee that they are worthy of perusal.

My object throughout has been to interest and profit both old and young, and incite to a more earnest and continued effort to aid in removing the greatest evil that can afflict any people.

If it succeeds in this, the highest ambition of the writer will be realized.

D. R.

KINTORE, December 20th, 1883.
