BOOK OF POEMS

JOHN W. CHADWICK.

BOSTON: LITTLE, BROWN, AND COMPANY. 1905.

To one all honesty and truth, To one all tenderness and love,-Father and Mother, - and to one Who dwells with happy saints above; -Thou, Sister, who wast more to me Than lips of mine can ever say; Dispeller of my darkest night, Dear prophet of my better day; To one who calls me Brother still, Most kind to me and all of mine, Strong to uphold in time of need Though tremulous as the clinging vine; To one who full of years and grace Still called me by my earliest name, Whose simple praise I counted more Than any hollow voice of fame; To one, of all my friends most dear, A spirit brave and wise and good, Whose love has made me more a man, And made God's love more understood; And two, - of such the kingdom is, -Whose winsome prattle helps me more Than aught that I have ever gleaned From Bible-text or scholar's love; But most of all, to one whose hand Lies close in mine where er I roam; My sternest critic, safest guide, The dear wife-angel of my home.
