

PICTURES IN PROSE AND VERSE;
OR, PERSONAL
RECOLLECTIONS OF THE LATE
JANET HAMILTON, LANGLOAN

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649506675

Pictures in Prose and Verse; Or, Personal Recollections of the Late Janet Hamilton, Langloan by John Young

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

JOHN YOUNG

PICTURES IN PROSE AND VERSE; OR, PERSONAL
RECOLLECTIONS OF THE LATE
JANET HAMILTON, LANGLOAN

Pictures in Prose and Verse;

OR,

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS

OF

THE LATE JANET HAMILTON, LANGLOAN.

TOGETHER WITH

Several hitherto Unpublished Poetic Pieces.

BY

JOHN YOUNG,

AUTHOR OF "LAYS FROM THE POORHOUSE," "LAYS FROM THE INGLE NOOK,"
"HOMELY PICTURES IN VERSE," "POEMS AND LYRICS,"
"LOCHLOMOND SIDE AND OTHER POEMS," ETC.

*

GLASGOW:

GEORGE GALLIE, 99 BUCHANAN STREET.

1877.

AD. 5125

GLASGOW:
PRINTED BY HAY NISBET,
GEORGE STREET.

Preface.

It is now upwards of twenty years since my first serious attempt at verse-making saw the light in the columns of a Glasgow newspaper; and sixteen years, last November, since my first collected volume, "Lays from the Poorhouse," was published. Since that time I have published, in all, five volumes of verse, equal in size to the present; and while the merit of having been a zealous worker may fairly be granted me, not even the most arrogant of readers, I respectfully submit, will venture to tell me that my zeal might have been expended in a better cause, seeing that the prime object I had in view was an honest endeavour to provide the common necessaries of life for myself and family.

"The Muse, poor hizzie," did not find me in so congenial a situation as she found our national Bard in, at the plough, but within the dreary walls of a Poorhouse. And yet, thanks to the bountiful dealings of a beneficent Providence, and the generous countenance of many staunch old friends, this same homely Muse of mine, during the bygone sixteen years, has not only "kept the wolf from my door," but enabled me to pay every man—the tax-gatherer not excepted—twenty shillings in the pound, and raised me to a much more comfortable, yea, a much more honourable position in the social scale than that in which she found me. Nor, with the beneficent aids just mentioned, and though now in my fifty-second year, and so painfully near to being totally blind, that, for fully two years past, my wife has had to read and write for me, am I at all fearful of losing faith in the grateful old distich—

“We’ve aye been provided for, an’ sae will we yet.”

But here, very probably, some olympian-brow’d, star-gazing brother poet—if he will grant my claim to kinship—denounces all I have been saying as the vilest prostitution imaginable of the genius of any poet worthy the name. So be it, your bardship,—

“Sic flichts are far abune my power.”

But I have been dealing with facts; and a supremely greater poet than either of us need ever hope to become, has assured us that “Facts are chieft that winna ding,

An’ downa be disputed.”

So much then for self. And now a word or two in behalf of this other self, my sixth volume, or, as my old friend, Janet Hamilton, might have styled it, “the Benjamin o’ my pen.” And yet, albeit the youngling brings with it my first essay of much importance at prose writing, little if anything need be said for it by way of introduction, seeing that, like each of its elder brethren who have preceded it, the gabbie thing can, and will, speak for itsel’. And should it fare as well at the hands of my readers, critical, and otherwise, as its predecessors did, I shall have nothing whatever to complain of. It only remains, therefore, for me to express my sincere thanks to my numerous subscribers, old and new, for the honour of their patronage; and to the gentlemen of the Press, my cordial appreciation of the manner in which they have noticed my former volumes. This, in my own name, and that of my family, I now most heartily do; and beg each and all to rest assured that their kindness will ever be most gratefully remembered by me and mine.

And now, in the words of that much abused, but, in my humble opinion, well deserving individual, "Jonas Fisher,"—the now, by the way, admitted creation of one of the most amiable and talented of our Scotch nobility—I, for the sixth, and probably the last time, bid my readers a grateful adieu.

"Long prefaces are prigs, who hang
Text-cards upon a garden wall,
Meant to grow plums and apricots;
So now to business, readers all."

1 SWAN LANE, PORT DUNDAS,
GLASGOW, February, 1877.

Contents.

	PAGE
PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF THE LATE JANET HAMILTON, OF LANGLOAN,—
I. Introduction,	9
II. How I became Acquainted with Janet Hamilton,	13
III. Birth—Girlish Years—Early Marriage—and Settlement in Life,	20
IV. Langloan—Past and Present,	25
V. First Visit to Janet Hamilton—Her great Conversational Powers—“Crinoline”—Auld Neebour Johnny,	28
VI. Prominent Features of Character—The Gold Nugget—Total loss of Eyesight—Failing Health—Last Illness, and Death,	32
VII. Funeral and Interment—Conclusion,	37
The Sabbath Bells : A Voice from the Poorhouse,	42
Retrospection,	46
To a Glasgow Lady, on the Death of her Husband,	50
Domestic Havers : or, oor Guidwife and her Easy Chair,	52
Epistle to the Late Very Rev. Dean Ramsay,	59
Suggested by seeing an Aged Friend Feeding a Robin-Redbreast,	63
A Prayer for the Recovery of my Aged Father from Severe Illness,	66
In Memoriam—John Young,	68
On Erecting a Tombstone to the Revered Memory of my Parents,	71
The Widow—A True Tale,	73
To a Friend,	76
A Town's Cock to a Friend in America,	77
Contentment ; or, the Twin Sisters,	84