PREFATORY NOTE

This volume is designed to present to American readers a general impression of the many-sided character and the varied work of the great Preacher whom Mr. Gladstone not inaptly described as "the last of the Puritans." The compiler of these pages was for years a near neighbor to Mr. Spurgeon; he has preached in his Tabernacle; lectured to the Students of the Pastors' College; and talked to the Boys in the Orphanage at Stockwell. His opportunities of studying Mr. Spurgeon and his work were numerous and favorable; his many pleasant memories of the great Preacher afford him special advantages for the grateful task of telling America what manner of man the Pastor of the Tabernacle was.
