

VINDICATION OF THE
ENGLISH CONSTITUTION
IN A LETTER TO A NOBLE
AND LEARNED LORD

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649729685

Vindication of the English Constitution in a Letter to a Noble and Learned Lord by Benjamin Disraeli

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

VINDICATION OF THE
ENGLISH CONSTITUTION
IN A LETTER TO A NOBLE
AND LEARNED LORD

10-22

6032

VINDICATION
OF THE
ENGLISH CONSTITUTION

IN A

LETTER

TO A

NOBLE AND LEARNED LORD.

Benj

BY

DISRAELI THE YOUNGER.

LONDON
SAUNDERS AND OTLEY, CONDUIT STREET.
1835.

LONDON :
ROBINSON AND PALMER, PRINTERS, SAVOY STREET, STRAND.

© 17 Nov 13 F. S.

SYNOPSIS

OF THE

FOLLOWING TREATISE.

---

Of Writers on the English Constitution . . .	Page 2
Of the Utilitarian System; its fallacies . . .	3—13
Of abstract principles in Politics, and of the degree of Theory that enters into Politics . . .	14—16
Of Magna Charta . . . . .	17—20
Petition of Right . . . . .	21
Of Precedent, Prescription, and Antiquity . . .	22—25
Of the formation of a free Constitution . . . .	26
Of the attempts of the French to form a free Constitution: Reasons of their failure: Fallacy of adopting the English Constitution in France . . . . .	27—35
Of the attempts to establish the English Constitution in the Sicilies and the Peninsula . . . . .	35—37
Of the last attempt of the French to form a free Govern- ment: La Fayette and Lord Somers compared . . .	38—45
Of the Constitutional development of Prussia . . .	46—56
Constitution of the United States exercises the same fatal influence over America as that of England over Europe: Mexico, Chili, Peru, contrasted with France, Spain, and Portugal . . . . .	56—59

class 3-31-31 IWN

Of the "Wisdom of our Ancestors" . . . . .	60—64
The "House of Commons" not the "House of the People" . . . . .	65—67
The Political Institutions of England, sprung from its legal Institutions . . . . .	68
Nature of the Representative principle . . . . .	69
Original character of the English Parliament . . . . .	70
Of the Estate of the Knights . . . . .	71—75
Rise of the Towns . . . . .	76 80
Creation of the Estate of the Commons . . . . .	81
The House of Commons an Equestrian Chamber . . . . .	81—84
Why the Equality of Civil Rights was established in England at so early a period of our History . . . . .	85—87
Why Liberty flourished under the Plantagenets . . . . .	88
Why Liberty declined under the Tudors . . . . .	90
Primary effect of Protestantism in England not favourable to our Civil Liberties . . . . .	92
Of the Constitution of the House of Commons under the Tudors, and of the system of Borough Representation . . . . .	93—102
Anecdote of the Pacha of Egypt: Representation without Election illustrated . . . . .	102—106
Why the Political Consequences of the Protestant Religion on the Continent were different to those in England, and why favourable to Civil Liberty: Protestantism creates a Republican Religion . . . . .	107
Introduction of the phrase "THE PEOPLE" into European Politics . . . . .	108
Attempts of the English Aristocracy to restore the Constitution of the Plantagenets under Charles the First . . . . .	111
Constitutional Reformers, and Root and Branch Reformers: the Root and Branch Reformers attack the Church, and alarm the Constitutional Reformers . . . . .	114
The Root and Branch Reformers deserted by the Constitutional Reformers form an anti-national alliance with the Scotch Covenanters . . . . .	115

Parallel between passing events and the reign of Charles the First . . . . .	116—117
Government of "THE PEOPLE" established in England. Its Practical consequences. THE NATION seeks refuge from "THE PEOPLE" . . . . .	118—121
Public Opinion not less influential in the age of Charles the First than at the present day: European Movement described . . . . .	122—124
Of the latter Stuarts . . . . .	125
Blunders of the Whigs in their Reform of the House of Commons; but the original character of the House of Commons still retained: not the House of the People . . . . .	127—129
Of the constitution of the House of Lords . . . . .	130—134
Of the Spiritual Lords: the Bench of Bishops a democratic Institution . . . . .	133—138
Of the Temporal Lords . . . . .	139
Of the Peerage Bill: Attempts of the Whigs to establish an Oligarchy . . . . .	140
Irresponsibility of the House of Lords considered: the Lords not more irresponsible than the Commons . . . . .	141—146
The Qualification of the Peers the same as the Commons, hereditary: Hereditary Legislators not more absurd than Hereditary Electors: The principle of Hereditary Legislation not constitutionally anomalous . . . . .	147—148
The principle of Hereditary Legislation not abstractedly absurd . . . . .	149—153
Political Institutions must be judged by their results: The Hereditary Peerage contributes to the stability of the State: the House of Lords in ability always equal to the House of Commons: superior since the Reform . . . . .	153—155

The principle of Hereditary Legislation prevalent in the House of Commons, and sanctioned by the national character . . . . .	156
The Hereditary principle must not be considered abstractedly: The French Senate examined: Why an Hereditary Senate, composed of the ablest men, may be a political non-entity: Necessary qualities of an assembly like the English House of Lords . . . . .	157—162
Causes of the Harmony between the two Houses . . . . .	163
The Hereditary principle must also be considered in reference to the system of parties in this country . . . . .	164
Summary: that the principle of Hereditary Legislation is neither constitutionally anomalous, nor abstractedly absurd, nor practically injurious, but the reverse . . . . .	165
Of the Kingly Office, . . . . .	166—167
Unsuccessful attempts of the Whigs to establish an Oligarchy under William the Third . . . . .	168
Reign of Anne; its influence on parties . . . . .	169
More successful attempts of the Whigs to establish an Oligarchy under George the First. They establish the Cabinet and banish the King from his own Council; pass the Septennial Act, and introduce the Peerage Bill. Oligarchical coups d'état . . . . .	170
Policy of the Whigs under George the First, compared with their Policy at the present day . . . . .	172
George the Second unsuccessfully struggles against the Whig Oligarchs . . . . .	173
George the Third emancipates the nation from them . . . . .	173
Of Whigs and Tories: their origin explained, and their real character ascertained . . . . .	174
Why the advocacy of divine right, non-resistance and passive obedience by the Tories in the reign of George the First, were evidences of the Democratic character of the party . . . . .	177

The Whigs an Oligarchical faction. The Tories a national party . . . . .	178
Why the Whigs are, ever have been, and ever must be, odious to the English nation . . . . .	181
Why the Whigs are hostile to the establishments of the country . . . . .	181
Probable consequences of Whiggism, and degrading effects of

Page 115, first line, read and Root and Branch.
160, last line, for the read their.

Three points to which the Tories must at the present moment apply themselves . . . . .	192
Tories vindicated from the charges of Corruption, Bigotry, and Hostility to Improvement . . . . .	193—197
Causes and consequences of Political Conciliation . . . . .	198
Vindication of the recent policy of Sir Robert Peel and his Cabinet . . . . .	199—201
The political power of the Tories distinguished from their social power: the political power maintained at present by a series of great Democratic measures . . . . .	202—203
General view of the English Constitution: shown to be a complete Democracy . . . . .	204
English and French Equality contrasted . . . . .	205—207
Conclusion . . . . .	208—210