

GREAT AMERICAN ISSUES,
POLITICAL,
SOCIAL, ECONOMIC (A CONSTRUCTIVE STUDY)

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649596706

Great American Issues, Political, Social, Economic (a Constructive Study) by John Hays
Hammond & Jeremiah W. Jenks

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND & JEREMIAH W. JENKS

GREAT AMERICAN ISSUES,
POLITICAL,
SOCIAL, ECONOMIC (A CONSTRUCTIVE STUDY)

GREAT AMERICAN ISSUES

GREAT AMERICAN ISSUES
POLITICAL SOCIAL ECONOMIC (A CONSTRUCTIVE STUDY)

BY JOHN HAYS HAMMOND
AND JEREMIAH W. JENKS

Library of Congress

NEW YORK
CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
1923

10

INTRODUCTION

530894

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER	PAGE
I.—TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW	I

Preparation as essential for peace as for war—Internationalism during the war—The limitations of international friendship—Political and industrial unrest intensified by the war—National readjustments necessary to meet new conditions—Scope of the problems to be solved—Inadequacy of pre-war standards of efficiency—American advantages and disadvantages contrasted—Fundamental difference between conditions in America and Europe—The "vicious circle" of cheap labor, low costs and over-production—Importance of a more equitable distribution of wealth—Substance rather than form the test of popular Government—America's opportunity in promoting world Democracy—Meaning of the term "Democracy"—The relation of individual to national welfare—Problems involved in promoting individual welfare—Fundamental importance of education.

I. PROBLEMS OF GOVERNMENT

II.—WHAT THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD DO	15
---------------------------------------------	----

Democracy versus Autocracy—Essentials to the expression of the Democratic Ideal—The proper function of Government—The criterion of Good Government—The limitations of Government—Popular fallacies as to the scope and power of Government—Governmental action restrictive rather than constructive—Functions assigned to the Government by Common Consent—Government ownership versus private ownership of public utilities—The evils of Government Ownership—Its Political Consequences—Freight rates on Government owned and on privately owned railways—Postal service a logical Government monopoly, not always efficient—The proper basis for determining the question of Government ownership—Political ideals versus methods of administration—Discontent with the Government a normal characteristic of Democracy—What the Government can do.

CHAPTER	PAGE
III.—POLITICS AND THE CITIZEN	26
The relation of politics to Government—The politician versus the statesman—The basis of good Government—Present-day obstacles to good Government—Predominance of lawyers in politics—Conditions which fitted the lawyer for political leadership—Political aptitude not synonymous with aptitude for Government—Defects of legal training as a preparation for constructive leadership—Inadequate representation of business men in public life—Importance of education in civic duty—Occupations which should contribute constructive thought to our political life—Sacrifices involved by the participation of business men in politics—Importance of a broader conception of our political responsibilities.
IV.—IDEALS OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY	40
Confusion as to the meaning of the term democracy—Influence of political machinery on representative Government—The substitution of delegated Government for representative Government—The decrease of faith in representative Government—Measures adopted by moderates to restore representative Government—The methods of the extremists—The evils of the Initiative, the Referendum, and the Recall—The agencies which have led to political reforms—The two-party system—The problem of securing competence in politics—Factors in the weakness of our representative system—The defects of the Primary—Methods for improving the Primary.
V.—THE STRUGGLE FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT	54
Political skill versus administrative ability—The relation of politics to Government—Politics a legitimate function of legislative practise—Sound principles of more importance than political advancement—Reasons for filling executive positions through election—Eliminating politics from administration—Fallacy of applying the elective principle to technical positions—Need for permanent undersecretaries in the executive departments—British system of permanent undersecretaries—Selection of undersecretaries—Executive ability versus administrative skill—Evil effects of decentralized authority—Wisdom of allowing the chief executive to appoint his subordinates—Tendency toward higher standard of public morality—Fundamental defects of the spoils system—Disadvantage of a multiplicity of executive appointments—Advantages of the Civil Service system—Practical defects of the Civil Service—Report of the joint congressional Com-

CONTENTS

vii

CHAPTER		PAGE
	mission on Re-classification of Salaries —The Civil Service retirement system—Tendency of private business toward Civil Service procedure—Business principles as a guide to better Government.

II. PROBLEMS OF LABOR

VI.—	LABOR, CAPITAL, AND THE COMMUNITY	75
------	------------------------------------------	----

International aspects of the relations between Labor and Capital—Advantages and disadvantages of our export trade—The proper ratio of export trade to our total trade—Advantages of domestic consumption of our raw materials—Factors in determining the mutual relations of Labor and Capital—Community interests involved in the adjustment of relations between Labor and Capital—Demands of Labor and Capital contrasted—Interests of Labor and Capital reciprocal—The relation of labor conditions to public interests—Industrial Autocracy versus Industrial Democracy—The evils of an Industrial Autocracy—Unwise extension of the principle of industrial freedom—Attitude of Labor and Capital toward the public—Relation of labor disputes to the American standard of living.

VII.—	THE STANDARD OF LIVING	83
-------	-------------------------------	----

Scope of the term "Standard of Living"—Influence of American industrialism on the Standard of Living—Aspects of the improved Standard of Living—Education as a factor in advancing the Standard of Living—Activity versus frugality as the basis of American prosperity—Importance of thrift—Classes most affected by the increased cost of living—Relative changes in the incomes of salaried employees and wage-earners since the beginning of the war—Importance of maintaining and improving the Standard of Living—Relation of rising prices to social unrest—Effect of rising prices—A survey of wages—Difference between real and nominal wages—Professor Fisher's plan for stabilizing the purchasing power of the dollar—Desirability of stable relations between prices and wages—Fundamental importance of the individual in adjusting the Standard of Living—The plea for an adequate wage—Minimum wage legislation—Need for further trial of legislation providing an adequate wage in American industries.

VIII.—	LABOR DISPUTES	97
--------	-----------------------	----

Significance of labor disputes—The strike as a weapon in industrial conflicts: Its purpose; results—Possi-

CHAPTER	PAGE
bility of preventing strikes—Statistics of strikes in the United States—The economic loss from strikes—Strikes not wholly preventable—Compulsory arbitration as a remedy for strikes—The principal methods of settling labor disputes: Mediation, Investigation, Arbitration, Cooperation—Methods of arbitration contrasted—The weakness of existing systems of arbitration—Arbitration Courts as a means of settling labor disputes—Relation of industrial organization to collective bargaining—Collective bargaining as viewed by the British Industrial Council—Public sentiment as a factor in the settlement of labor disputes—Prevention of strikes and industrial disputes—Profit sharing not very successful—Labor cooperation in the management of industry—A suggested plan of labor participation in management—The great complexity of business.
IX.—UNEMPLOYMENT	115
Relation of unemployment to the Standard of Living—The practical problem of unemployment—Unemployment through sickness—Economic value of Public Health work—Importance of thrift in mitigating the effects of sickness—Growth of voluntary Health Insurance—Prevention of sickness through Health Insurance—Compulsory Health Insurance—Relation of seasonal occupations to unemployment—Free employment bureaus as a preventative of unemployment—The United States Employment Service—Relieving unemployment in periods of industrial depression: Through restriction of immigration; through expenditures for public works.
X. IMMIGRATION	128
Immigration a menace to the American Standard of Living—Immigration from 1820 to 1916—Census statistics of 1910—Deterioration in the quality of our immigrants since 1880—Immigration by countries 1904-1913—Low standards of recent immigrants—Immigration and the labor supply—Aspects of the competition between immigrants and native wage-earners—Changes in the ratio of high-wage to low-wage immigration—Foreign-born population of the United States in 1900 and in 1910—The evils of unrestricted immigration—Legislation restricting immigration—Defects of the literacy test—The traits of a desirable immigrant—Percentage of immigrants fully naturalized—The tendency toward naturalization as a basis for regulating immigration—Advantages of inspection of foreign ports—Need for an Immigration Commission.	