FOREWORD

In the year 1918, principally for my own amusement, I printed GLEANINGS FROM IRISH MANUSCRIPTS. The small edition was soon exhausted, and many eyes, including my own, have been watching for stray copies for over a decade of years. I may then be accorded indulgence if I issue the booklet again, and add to its contents a few essays which ought to be of value while Irish literature continues to be cherished. In the first edition I presumed on the liberality of my good friends the many editors of IRISLEABHAR MUIGHE NUADHAÍAT, and the editor and publishers of THE CATHOLIC BULLETIN. To all I express my grateful acknowledgments, and to the latter a special word of thanks for now allowing me to reprint "Scraps from Irish Scribes." To the editor of THE IRISH ECCLESIASTICAL RECORD, and to the publishers, Messrs Browne and Nolan, Dublin, I am indebted for permission to reprint "Who will buy my Poem," and "A Letter of John MacSolly." The Franciscan Prague Letter was given me, as indicated in the proper place, by Dr. Patrick O'Neill, who made the transcripts in St. Isidore's, Rome. My friend, Colm O Lochlainn, to whose initiative this second edition is due, looked well to the printing, and he added the Index to enhance whatever interest the collection may have.
