PREFACE.

THE age of geographical discovery is nearly over. The round world has been traversed, and all its continents laid bare.

But are there not regions yet to come within the ken of humanity more beautiful and more beneficial to know than any hitherto found?

Is the Land of Social Unity yet explored? or is a true chart of the Ocean of Life yet drawn?

It was to learn, if possible, more of these, to approach them nearer, but, at the same time, not to lose sight of our work-a-day world, I set forth.

Those who would condemn as chimerical, and those who would adopt as reality, what I have described, would be equally in the wrong. The gist thereof is a Speculative Hope.

H. W.
