ADVERTISEMENT.

THE life here printed for the first time is preserved in the Tanner MSS. (278 f. 15 sq.) together with several of Bedell's letters, and a second life by his son-in-law Clogy, which has been published from a Harleian MS. The collection was made with a view to publication by archbishop Sancroft, whose services to English history have never been duly appreciated. Transcripts of these and other papers were confided to me some years ago by the learned historian of the Irish church, archdeacon Cotton. I added letters from the state paper office and other repositories, and went to press in 1866, intending to defer to the last the separate issue of this, the shorter and more interesting of the two lives. Being still unable to complete the larger book, and unwilling longer to delay such help as I can render to the disendowed church of Ireland, I have resolved to issue at once the bare text as it stands; for
