PREFACE

---

GREAT importance is now attached to the Analysis of Sentences. The subject has been very fully treated by the authors in their "English Grammar and Analysis." As, however, the limits of that work precluded a comprehensive and exhaustive treatment, it has been deemed desirable to issue the present work in which an attempt is made to elucidate every difficulty which can offer itself to the student of Analysis. To meet the requirements of those who present themselves for examination in English subjects, a treatise on Paraphrasing is added.

It will be observed that the text of the Analysis in the "English Grammar and Analysis" is incorporated in this work, but the additions are very considerable.

Attention may be called to the following features :—

1. Full explanations of illustrative examples are given.
2. A vast amount of information and assistance is given in the Observations:

3. Various approved methods of analysis are supplied.
4. Models of Analysis, adapted to each stage and illustrating every point in the text, are furnished.
5. An alphabetical list of connectives, showing the different kinds of sentences each connective joins, is introduced to serve as a table of reference.
6. Peculiar and difficult constructions are considered and explained.
7. Full instructions for paraphrasing are given.
8. The Exercises contain numerous passages for Analysis and Paraphrasing.
9. The Exercises and illustrative examples consist of sentences taken from Standard authors.
