THE SECOND EDITION.

THE following Poems were written amid the orange and olive groves of Italy, during a winter spent (for the sake of health) upon the shores of the Mediterranean Sea.

Their aim is the highest to which any human compositions may aspire—to honour God, and help man along the way to Heaven.

Their attainment of this object must of course largely depend upon the extent to which they have caught the pure spirit of those sacred seasons which called them forth, and which they are designed to illustrate.

It has pleased God so far to prosper them, that a Second Edition has been called for.

After a careful revision they are now sent forth again into the world with the same hope and prayer which accompanied them on their first departure :— That they may, under God, lead some souls into a more fervent use of our English Ritual ; teaching them how truly—in its deep earnestness, and tender spirituality—‘ we have the mind of Christ.’

BOHAM VICARAGE, SURREY.

Ascension Day, 1859.
